Wise and Stanley Reconciled—the Rhode Island Troubles in the Senate, &c.

From our Special Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, May 21.

I have the pleasure of assuring you that the personal difficulties of Messrs. Wise & Stanley have been amicably and honorably adjusted. The conduct of their mutual friends on this occasion is worthy of all commendation, and the terms of reconciliation, which are said to be entirely satisfactory to the parties themselves, cannot fail to secure the approbation of their friends generally.

The inglorious termination of the war in Rhode Island has cast a gloom over the countenances, and defeated the sedulous hopes of the anarchists in the Senate of the United States. The thunder of ALLEN has subsided, and the muttering of the wrath of his coadjutors are all leveled against the Bobadil-Captain of the outbreak. Notwithstanding, you may hear of some amusing passages in debate on Monday next. The motion to print the Resolutions of the Ohio Senator will probably engage the Senate on that day, and call forth an interesting and instructive discussion. Mr. CRITTENDEN, Mr. CALHOUN and Mr. PRESTON have signified their intention to analyze the principle involved in these propositions, and it is unnecessary for me to inform you that they will be thoroughly tested. It is curious to perceive from what insignificant and accidental sources the most profound and luminous principles of Civil Government sometimes proceed. In anticipation of the masterly developments of the laws and Constitutions of our country by the distinguished statesmen, I think I may safely predict the utter annihilation of the crude and antiquated doctrines of the demagogues in Congress. It will be a treat to witness the conflict. Come on and see it.

Besides this, I learn that Senator LINN has moved a reconsideration of the vote of Thursday upon the Jackson fine. Rare elucidation may be expected from the renewal of the debate upon this subject.

I have not a moment longer to write—it is 3 o'clock.

CURTIS.
